Director of Security

SUBJECT: Indications and Warnings in Europe

1. As you indicated in your covering note, the subject matter in this problem is quite diffuse and, I daresay, rather complex - to the point where I cannot say I grasp the entire proposition.

2. I do believe that you are quite right in recommending not granting blanket authority to the Director, DIA to provide high-level compartmented briefings utilizing

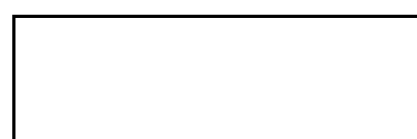

If such briefings are an absolute necessity, at least the procedure you recommend ensures that the DCI and, on his behalf, COMIREX will satisfy themselves that no alternative materials are available to meet the requirement.

3. Without knowing more about the remaining proposals, I must defer on them. However, it would seem that they may well require further study. If that is the case, and you feel we can be of assistance, we would be happy to participate.
